

The summary below highlights key articles published on KrebsOnSecurity during the week of May 7, 2025:

1. Microsoft releases patches to fix at least 70 vulnerabilities, including five zero-day flaws that are already being exploited.

Link

2. A group of hackers known as The Dirty Dozen has claimed responsibility for a massive data breach at a global law firm, exposing sensitive information from more than 100,000 clients.

Link

3. A federal grand jury has indicted a Ukrainian man for his role in a global cyber extortion campaign known as NetWalker, which infected thousands of organizations worldwide with ransomware.

Link

4. A researcher has discovered that a popular app used by U.S. military service members and their families is secretly sending sensitive data to servers in China.

Link

5. A group of cybercriminals has been using social engineering tactics to trick victims into downloading malware that steals their cryptocurrency wallets.

Link

6. A Russian cybercrime group known as EvilCorp is using a new tool called "CrySIS" to steal cryptocurrency from exchange platforms and wallets.

Link

7. A former administrator of the infamous hacker forum BreachForums has agreed to pay $700,000 in a settlement related to a healthcare data breach.

Link

8. A new variant of the Emotet malware has been discovered, which is being used to steal user credentials and install other malicious payloads.

Link

9. A security researcher has found that a popular password manager app for Android is vulnerable to a phishing attack, allowing attackers to steal users' credentials.

Link

10. A new strain of ransomware known as "Conti" is being used by a group of hackers to attack healthcare organizations in the United States.

Link

The full articles can be found on the KrebsOnSecurity website.